WORTHINGTON RAPS DISTRICT TAXATION

Attorney Tells City Club That Capital Residents Are In "Virtual Slavery."

Residents of Washington are not fit to be called citizens of the United States if they complacently submit to the virtual state of slavery to which the people of the District have been subjected by Congress, according to A. S. Worthington, prominent attorney, who addressed the weekly forum luncheon of the City Club yesterday afternoon at the clubhouse on "District Suffrage and Taxation."

The luncheon, held under auspices of the club's District suffrage group, was the first of a series of public hearings on the subject of the District's taxation and equality before the Federal courts.

Roy L. Neuhouser, chairman of the group, who presided, said that the group would strive to bring all suffrage factions in the District under one banner, so that the people of the District could present a solid front in their demands upon Congress at the coming session.

Paul E. Leah, secretary of the group, said that the group would center all of its efforts for the present upon national representation.

Mr. Worthington said that the American colonists fought vigorously England's contention that Parliament should have exclusive legislative control over the colonies despite the fact that they were not represented, yet these same colonists have been accused of imposing the same slavery upon the unrepresented residents of the District. He said he did not think this was a fair interpretation, however, of the colonists' attitude, and pointed out that James Madison, one of the three men responsible for the raising of the tax rate here from $1.50 to $1.95, attacked the 60-40 fiscal plan, and scored the effort of Congress to appropriate for Federal uses the District's surplus fund of $4,600,000.
